Dear Mr. Lamb:

I just wanted to offer my thanks for your broadcasts of Ireland's struggles to choose a Taoiseach and also for your interview of two American students at Trinity. As an American of Irish descent, I was gratified to see coverage of events in Ireland that did not center on the 'atrocities' of the IRA -- in other words, that did not merely serve to promote Margaret Thatcher's perception of the Irish as barbarians.

As the events of the last election have shown, Ireland may be on the verge of a new era. It will be interesting to watch the country's efforts to emerge from the Civil War mentality and become a modern nation.

Thanks again.

Yours,
