Dear Mr Lamb:

Just a few comments.

First, let me thank you for C-SPAN now being in Bluefield WV. My mother can now participate in your exercise in democracy and meaningful political journalism.

Second, I would note that, upon watching the last 10 minute recess of the "Keating Five" hearing, it dawned on me that this hearing is Shakespearian in content.

That, as the players storm across the stage, it becomes clearer and clearer that this hearing is "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing."

Watching the lawyers mingle among one another, laughing and patting one another on the back, it also became clear why they should be so happy. They are getting fat fees, fully aware that their clients will never suffer conviction, much less sentencing.

Third, I would once again heap praise on you and your fine organization.

I just completed reading "Anchors" and the content of that book clearly indicates that the major networks have abdicated their responsibility of meaningful and substantive journalism to you and CNN.

Finally, as my enclosed abbreviated resume indicates, I guess that I am no longer a "wannabe". I am, after 12 years absent from journalism school, now a "wantedtobe".
