October 15th

Dear Brian Lamb (C-SPAN):

Praise C-SPAN

Usually, when I turn on my TV, the first channel I select is 20. On Dimension Cable that is C-SPAN. C-SPAN2 is on 17, but I never watch 18 and 19, so my TV remote ignores them. So I easily can switch between the companion networks.

If it were not for C-SPAN and Rush Limbaugh, I would not know the truth about our country because of the intentional misquotes from America's legal criminal class, a.k.a. Congress, and America's self-appointed gods, a.k.a. the (rest of the) media. C-SPAN covers events completely and without editing. Good!

A good example of something we'll never hear about in any other way (without the usual liberal lies) is the review Charles Murray of the American Enterprise Institute gave of his forthcoming book.

I know that part of the money I pay Dimension Cable each month goes to C-SPAN. To me it is one of the best ways I spend money. I still can't believe that the criminal Congress allows their sordid dealings to be made public. They probably didn't learn that part of the lesson from Al Capone.

But I'm not complaining. Keep up the good work!

Sincerely,

Dear Charles Murray:

Copy to Brian Lamb at C-SPAN

I watched your whole presentation on C-Span last night and agree you will have lots of intentional misquotes from America's legal criminal class, a.k.a. Congress, and America's self-appointed gods, a.k.a. the media.

You did a good job of presentation and I am grateful to C-SPAN for their complete and unedited coverage. If it weren't for C-SPAN and Rush Limbaugh, I wouldn't know the truth about our country.

Nice job of defusing the liberal heckler who wanted to rewrite your book for you! As soon as you finished, I switched to the companion C-SPAN and there was Brian Lamb with at least one liberal journalist. I kid you not. Just then Brian held up an article from the local newspaper, I think it was the Washington Post. The article completely misrepresented your position and Brian's liberal guest took off from there. Had I not just seen you, I would have easily concluded you were in favor of exactly what you are opposed to.

I'm not faulting Brian. He was a moderator and simply brought up the newspaper article. I like Brian, and hope he looks at the C-SPAN tape of your talk so in the future he will know your true position.

As the sun always shines, even though we sometimes can't see it for the clouds and smokescreens, so liberals will always attack anything that opposes more taxes, more government, unfunded mandates and other noble (to them) causes. Individualism is good, you said. I agree!

Sincerely,
