

To whom it may concern,

I am sixteen years old. I watched the slightly one sided discussion on Homosexuality and Public policy. I am not gay, but am close to several people that are. I suppose that I pretend to understand them because, I don't. Frankly, it is beyond me.

Our society is falling, spiraling toward self destruction. I am sickened at what is occurring around me. The spread of violence, disease, rebellion simply for the sake of rebellion, and declining standards for what used to be common place courtesy, I don't know much about the world I suppose, I am simply a high-school student, but the cases that I have been hearing about were simply appalling. The homosexual community is after a type of individuality which is exactly what other minorities have tried to shake away from in the past, when the right to share (not push) your religion is restricted to an extent that you may be legally liable, then something has to break!

yet, somehow homosexuality brings
about higher ratings and popularity.
It's scary.

I am not an adult, but I ask myself, what is happening to the children?

I would prefer not
to give my name.
Thank you for your attention.

P.S. - No, it's not natural.

Private matters are private, they should not influence work/education.

This "hate crimes" bill should not be part of our future.
