Mr. Scully,

These are just some comments. I watch your show regularly and I like getting down my thoughts. I have always been interested in politics and what is going on around me.

I can sum up who I am in a couple of sentences. I am 76 yrs. old, widowed for 25 yrs., live alone, still work part time, graduated from college June 1994, fulfilling a lifetime dream, am blessed with a most loving family, son-daughter, 6 grandchildren & their spouse and 9 darling great grandchildren.

I am neither a democrat, republican or independent. I like to feel I vote for the person most interested in the common man & this beautiful country. I cast my first vote for F D R, whom I still think the best president we have ever had. His words "you have nothing to fear but fear itself" has sustained me through trying times. I have voted, to name some, Dke, Jimmy Carter, Reagan, J F K, Bush and Bill Clinton. I like his caring for people like me.

I get so sick hearing Pres. Clinton didn't serve in military. Calling him a draft dodger makes my blood boil. My son chose to go to Viet Nam, had he chose otherwise I would not have been a mother who lived in fear for 1 whole year. I can't understand the logic that if Bill had served he would make a better Commander in Chief. What exactly would he have learned in the trenches or behind a desk that would have better prepared him? He has advisors.

Why do persons keep harping on his getting their approval in Haiti. Don't you think he knew he wouldn't have gotten it & this was something he felt he had to do. I am so against violence and war but I have supported him from the beginning. I have visited Haiti. Those people need help and we who have so much should not be against helping those who had so little even if it means, and I don't know it does, more tax.

The media and press slaps he gets are uncalled for. Why don't we hear about the good things, economy, edume & this mornings news told of Haitian going home saving immigration. As for the moral issue. I wonder how many people in Congress or gov. do not have a past. Sure I feel this kind conduct is wrong but this is between Bill, Hillary & their God. "Let he who is without sin cast the first stone". As for Whitewater the first prosecutor found no wrong doing. Why didn't it rest there so our Congress could get on with business. Give De Mato a chance for rhetoric. Bob Mayle, seems such an unhappy vindictive person. He and Phil Graham are out to get the President not to help the people they represent. I have never seen the hatred that is aimed at this President. You know, Jesus was so persecuted because people didn't agree with his messages but he was right and saved us all.

I think Carter did us a great service in Haiti but I also think it is time for him to back away. It is our President who now should lead the way. I don't understand Congress taking time to pass a bill saying we should get out of Haiti when the President has already stated these were his intentions. Isn't there thing more beneficial they should be addressing.

I listened to Rep. John Saxton yesterday. He was calm & put forth some good & constructive thoughts until he was challenged. Then over

he seemed to lose his cool, yelling and interrupting. This seems to be a trademark with Republicans this year leaving me no alternative but to vote Dem in most races.

Thanks for listening. I sometime feel such a need to be able to do something constructive
