Dear C Span:

Congratulations. Your coverage of the presidential primary campaigns in New Hampshire is superb. You are making a tremendous contribution to the democratic process, allowing citizens to observe, to listen, to judge for themselves, to express their views and to ask questions. There is so much about commercial TV that is antithetical to serious thought the very existence of C Span is heartening. You have renewed my hope for this country and my respect for its people. And besides all that, you have allowed me to attend rallies, press conferences, dinners and other gatherings that I greatly enjoyed. You are TV at its best - a best that is much better than I ever thought it could be.

Each one of your interviewers is excellent (even though as an ex-English teacher I wish that Steve Scully would omit the "at" after "where we are"). The prize winner, however, is Brian Lamb. If there were the equivalent of a Pulitzer prize for interviewing he certainly should receive it.

To everyone at C Span my profound thanks. Long may you continue.
