C-SPAN:

re: Once more,
once more

Your "An American Profile" with [redacted], and that segment using [redacted] on the state of the newspaper industry are classics of the indictment you just cannot seem to grasp ---much less honor with equal time.

[redacted] is the prototypical specimen of the doctrinaire leftist, who would pander to JFK and go on to use his stewardship at the POST to shill for his pals while dragging his foes. In truth, Bradlee is emblematic of why the First Amendment in the U.S. is moribund; and, why we are in a crisis of press trust that will ultimately bring us down. If your operation---which certainly does offer valuable exposures now and then---does not fathom why K. Graham's cogent statement ("All---in so large a chorus---are hardly likely to be wrong;" circa 1972) is on-target as to the vast majority of offended citizens over this media monopoly-mess, then I shudder again.

Question: when will a real editor, one [redacted], also retired, be allowed a chance to rebut this ass who brays his own song endlessly ([redacted])? As for the lady, my lord, will no one at C-SPAN ever dare tell the hideous tale of broadcasting's grotesquerie of governmentally-ensured oligopoly?! Add the death of anti-trust in the Newspaper Preservation Act (also called the Failing Newspaper Act)!

Americans simply do not know the extent of their being manipulated, lied to, and generally propagandized. Ask Woody West of the WASH. TIMES, if you wish, as to why the Lichter-Rothman thesis is valid in triplicate. Reed Irvine is seen by you buffoons parading around as groundbreakers as not worthy of equal rebutting moments. Your panel of news-people invariably selects those of the feminized-left to the exclusion of much better reporters who abound in your area. Shame. In your own minds, you see, no right-thinking person would ever dare assume that this is a cultural sickness. When a week-long series on the only heroic measure left to a long-suffering people...common carrier? Ah, no, that will never arrive, be assured; and, proof of, once again, your ongoing insularity. With arrogance intact, you remain essentially partisans. [redacted]

Addendum:

The CSM is always offered in J-schools as the ideal format. Ms. [REDACTED] glossed over that neatly and tried to equate that organ with the "moonies" and their "dastardly" ways. Again, more proof of that offstage destructiveness that makes your third-party SOB's so nasty---and utterly non-credible en masse.

Thought: what on earth will your little buddies at IPS do now that the motherland is in collapse? I'm sure you will find a way, however, to ensure [REDACTED] & [REDACTED] more time in spotlight.

Every Enclave of Left-Handed Rosicrucians will get a day on C-SPAN, but never NRA--- yet another blot on your eschutcheon.

The true, bottom-line horror of all this is how seriously you take yourselves in your sins. [REDACTED]
