C-Span's Brian Lamb,

Thanks, C-span for your coverage of the Congress. What confuses me is how you get by with showing the viewing public the actions of the Congress. If I were a Congressman, I would do my best to have your network banned. You really show what is happening and it is really bringing to us what a bunch of silly people we have elected to run our country. How can anyone justify that enormous salary that we pay them to do what they do. I can only get C-span I, so I only see what the House does. I'm not sure I could take C-span II also.

I like your "Journalists Round Table," but I have an objection than many viewers call in people have objected to also and that is "Belway Journalists". Why not have some journalists that know about what is going on in the real world. It seems like most of the ones you have on, reflect the views of the editors only.

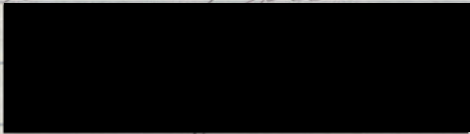

They seem to politicize everything. If their papers are conservatives, then they only see the conservative side, the same for liberals. There are only two people inside the beltway that I would like to see on your program, because I think they are honest. One is named Sarah and the other is named Helen. I can't tell their last names because I can't remember them. Another thing the "Beltway journalists" do, is Dodge the important questions. Ask one of them about the Japanese lobby money that goes into the pockets of the people that influence Congress.

That Ms Forbes you had on certainly did dismiss the Linnu issue. She said she thought his <sup>extravagances</sup> ~~extravagances~~ and news of them was a "Suspect in a teapot." It shows what she doesn't know about common people. It was, and is very important to us.

I would like to tell you that I think all of the moderators including everyone are really terrific at C-span. I don't know where C-span got them all, but they are all special.

Please see if you can get some outside journalists on your program in the future. Merry Xmas to all at C-span Sincerely Yours
