

LOVE B-LAMB!

good many

October 3, 1996

Dear Mr. Lamb:

Certainly, my letter will not contain singular accolades. You must receive mega-messages daily, with similar praise.

One cannot watch "C-Span" thru "medically" trained eyes without thinking of some axioms regarding persona and P-H-Y-S-I-O-G-N-O-M-Y. No! I am not a Phrenologist. We must start somewhere, and "The Good Book" states "It" the most simplistic ally. "Blood Tells."

No one speaks of truths like that in medical schools in this decade - It is true in your case Mr. Lamb, and I would suspect that your cranial cellular network must be running on "premium." We enjoy your controlled body language. Like 9/10 ~~this~~ of other T.V. Anchormen, you never "wear" an expression of arrogance or indifference, or condescension. Although you seem not to display a salubrious nature, there is often some Tell-Tale ocular terpsichore going on. Your "true" self perhaps?

Your gene pool, seemingly free of the algae of our present day hedonists, -shows it's blessed ascension in a variety of ways.

Your face and head are smooth, and formed symetrically. No clues to "sins of the father," or other generational romps or curses on the auld sod! Actually, your cranial contours are enviable. One can assume that your grey matter and all those dendrites are pleased to dwell in an annointed environment up there.

From the "Hand of the Creator," your general physiognomy is very well defined. At times you have a controlled and almost glacial expression. However it is always in synch with your fronta^l muscle, a few stories up. It is spirit lifting to see the tandem play of these talents. As a past-middle-age R.N. Broadcaster, excellence on the tube is a mental aphrodisiac.

My parents were both physicians and because I was an only child, they took me to all their lectures, conventions, and even some anatomy labs, their passion was genetics, and because of excellent recall, I heard and retained things not only politically incorrect now - but blasphemous in academia and other misleading settings. It's okay though Brian. They did buy a Shirley Temple doll for me once.

I'll delete a "Presidential spin" on "Beltway" Bumpology," smile, gait and hairline. Too much, and too many are "Yeltsin-esque"

C-Span is an airborne lighthouse for legions of Americans blinded by guile and nay-saying. Don't ever leave us for the arrogance of Ted, Sam, or Bryant. This is not the season for foolishness and the folks will face the facts soon.

As a host and interviewer, you are our "man for all reasons,"

My husband, a psychiatrist, our son an international attorney, and our daughter, a beauty with two degrees (turned Nashville twang singer). All appreciate the entire C-Span staff input under your banner of excellence.

May Brian Lamb always walk beneath a Platinum Umbrella.
Gratefully and Faithfully,
