It strikes me that you would like to know about Susan Mills, from whom I received the enclosed. I zeroxed the card so that you can read exactly what I received.

Susan graduated from Cornell, went on a program for living abroad, got excited about foreign affairs, graduated from Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies, and went to work at UN about the middle of the 1960s.

Since then she worked her way up the line and is now Deputy Controller of the UN. She has the detailed knowledge that enables her to answer questions in depth.

Very intelligent, very thorough, she did all her college work on scholarships. Her career is interesting, as well as what she has to give about the UN.

It should be possible for you to contact her for a copy of transcript, so that you could make the most of the potential.

And I would like to ask something---if you interview her [REDACTED] her birthday, have someone come in with a cup-cake and a small candle stuck in the middle. I had lunch with her about a year ago in the UN restaurant, close to her birthday which I recalled, and the waiter on hearing the word 'birthday' brought over a cup cake with a small candle in it, a pleasant surprise.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

P.S. [REDACTED] and knew her parents before she was born, etc.

Had to come for a series
of meetings, but also did a TV interview, a radio interview and a press conference, all on the UN financial situation. Got a great deal of coverage.

As usual, it's great to be back in Rome.

Hope you are well!
Love,
