

Brian Lamb -

Could you ever find a way of pointing out that German foundations fund their political parties through their voters' will. That public funding from foundations is allocated based upon voting results for candidates - parties. They take the business of democracy seriously, fairly and democratically. We need to, many other countries need to.

Italy's voters also allocate public funding to their parties. Has the war taught them a lesson many, including us, have yet to learn.

True democrat
