interrupt your perpetual whining at the world long enough to reflect that in just simply having arrived here in this amazing wonder called life, you have been the beneficiary of miracles far more improbable than it would take to get Santa Claus through that metal pipe and out of our wood-burning stove.

Dear Brian

C-Span provides interesting information about our Federal Gov. And I appreciate what you do. On rare occasions I disagree.
Your conversation with Nathan McCall was most interesting - and he has had and is having a remarkable life.

But when you asked him if he felt anger I was disappointed. During the last year anger has become the buzz word among some Americans. And for you to add your stature to the use of the word! Well I was shocked.

We have in America a media that many times seems to say that if an American feels anger then it is to be assumed that he or she will kill, destroy, burn etc - and that is OK. After all they were angry.

I wonder when the other Americans will get angry and act.

To review the human experience:

1. We all started out in caves
2. We all had the same opportunity to improve our standard of living down through the years 3. Some races made great improvements
- others did not. Just look at their native countries. But all had opportunity!
4. Now - these no-progress Americans have successfully hoodwinked the politicians and the media into believing that the rest of us are responsible for their lack of progress

Good manners can be a handicap

I do hope you get to read this.
Let me know if you do - please

Best Wishes
