

'C-Span decided to be politically correct'

Dear Editor

The Clintons and their gang seem to be doing a good job of indoctrinating many citizens into their way of thinking (or feeling?). Even C-Span, which was open to all ways of thinking in this country prior to the 1994 election, seems to have succumbed.

C-Span decided to be politically correct and split their lines into Democrats, Republicans, and Others. Then they started their morning program at 4 a.m. Pacific Time, 7 a.m. their time. Therefore, most of their calls are from the liberal Eastern portion of the country. We citizens west of the Mississippi are almost forgotten.

Before this occurred, we conservatives were able to get in occasionally. I became further disenchanted with C-Span when I heard Brian Lamb's response to Chris Matthews on Hardball when Chris asked him, "Why did you split the lines?" Brian's response was, "It was obvious that the calls coming in were instigated by phone banks." Not true! I guess Brian thinks that liberals are so moral and conscientious they can't be doing such as that under his new system.

As a result of this change, C-Span has steadily declined, in my opinion. The conservatives can't even get in any more. When we try to be honest and stick to the line as it is now set up, we can't be successful. I think there is really cheating going on now. I think liberals are calling in on Republican lines pretending to be Republican when they are not; same thing with the Others line.

This country has turned conservative but Washington (including Brian Lamb) and the Eastern Establishment can't be convinced of that. Therefore, I think anything coming out of Washington is propaganda. There are people calling in accusing Republicans and/or conservatives of viciousness, hatefulness, and other derogatory terms. In their minds, we are supposed to agree on all issues. We are not supposed to have differing views from theirs. Can't they see this is squelching free speech? One recent morning someone stated "Everybody is hating everyone else."

What is the matter with these people? Can't our citizens see that Bill Clinton and his cohorts have caused all this division — pitting race against race, poor against the rich, Christian against the anti-Christians, union control against those against it and many other issues?

These people are not using their God-given brains and minds to think for themselves. They just continue repeating the mantra of the Clintons' idealistic "brave new world." This is the same method which Stalin, Hitler and others of their ilk used. If we want to continue our free way of life, this should be stopped as soon as possible. I am fearful it may be too late.

Dear Brian

This is a letter I read
