To whom it may concern:

On the week-end of May 14-16, I looked in vain for any C-SPAN coverage of The American Cause Conference on Cultural Values in Washington, DC. None was provided, despite excellent speakers such as Pat Buchanan, Michael Medved and Senator Bob Smith.

Lesser conferences with lesser speakers have received C-SPAN coverage, and you gave the homosexual March on Washington massive coverage.

Failure to cover the American Cause Conference was a disservice to your viewers, and part of a disturbing trend on C-SPAN. You used to objectively present all viewpoints across the entire political spectrum. However, since Clinton's victory last November, I have noticed a decided shift to the political left.

If there is one thing America does not need, it is yet another public-affairs network with a liberal bias, but that is what C-SPAN has become.

Polls show the American people do not support Clinton's radical leftist agenda, so I don't know what audience you're trying to cater to.

Here's hoping that at some time in the future you will return to the balanced, wide-open style of journalism that made C-SPAN my favorite network, prior to 1993.

Sincerely,
