Dear C-SPAN:

I just finished watching the program concerning U.S.-Taiwaneese relations and I wanted to make a comment or two. I hope that I am not the only person to do so regarding this matter. I don't know why C-SPAN doesn't provide addresses where comments are to be sent as they have done in the past.

The first thing I wanted to say is that I agree with Senator Helms. It's as if the United States is scared to death of China. I also think that Senator Kerry made some outstanding assertions since it appears as though the U.S. point of view is that a peaceful solution is the only solution to the PRC-Taiwan problem. Last year I read in The Economist that the United States has given Taiwan blank checks that they are authorized to sign with american blood. That bothered me.

I realize that in the face of Senators my comments probably scream with naivete. I can however concieve of a hypothetical scenario/analogy. The PRC and Taiwan are like husband and wife so to speak who are involved in a domestic dispute. Taiwan slaps Beijing in the face but she wants to call the world police to help curtail her husband's wrath. The police arrives, there is a bloody stand off then soon after, Taiwan wants to kiss and make up. Then where does that leave the United States?

Thank you for your attention.

Yonder She Goes

As Old Glory folded in the breeze I gazed the sky, saw where my soul was: Yonder
she goes...
