To Whom It May Concern:

This morning, as many mornings, I was watching C-Span before going to work. I have to tell you I still can't believe what I saw on your call-in show. Without question, I've lost a lot of respect for C-Span for the content of the show this monrning.

It is surprising that C-Span would revert to such sensationalism at all, but that is what it looks like when you decide to discuss new allegations of an old story. These stories of extra-marital affairs by Mr. Clinton came up during the New Hampshire Primary. I found it interesting to read in a BOSTON GLOBE article, dated January 25, 1992, that the Gennifer Flowers story was really a setup to destroy the campaign of Mr. Clinton. John Hudgems, who was a press secretary to the last two Republicans that ran against him for Governor of Arkansas, helped negotiate Ms. Flowers' contract with the Star magazine.

Now, we have The American Spectator, a widely known conservative magazine, coming out with more of the same old stories. And at a time where it is, unquestionably, beneficial for those who oppose his views and efforts to slow his momentum in achieving his goals. I'm just flabbergasted that your organization would partake on such a low road that you did with this subject. I would really like to hear from you concerning this matter.

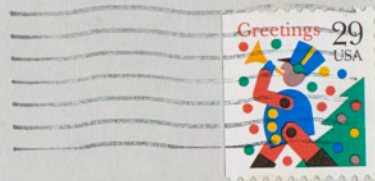

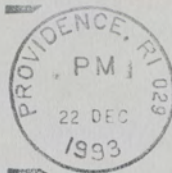

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
