

Monday, Feb. 21, '00

Dear Mr. Lamb:

I often watch, and enjoy, your Sunday program, Book Notes. But a few weeks ago, to my surprise, I found fault that the guest writer, Mrs. Huffington, was making remarks that were both offensive but also not based on truth.

She said in part, something to the effect that there were enough monuments to W.W.II veterans without the current drive to build one in Washington. I am in favor of that attempt which will honor my late husband and late brother, both W.W.II veterans, and am unaware of others - monuments - honoring "The Greatest Generation".

She also misrepresented N.Y. Mayor Guiliani's move to shelter the homeless, especially in bad weather. As I understood it, he tried to lure them into shelters, and if they, fearing loss of belongings, Refused, he proposed enforced sheltering by having them jailed. Sounded like a wise and efficient ^{MOVE} to me, as a Temporary Arrangement. In general, I thought some of her remarks rather flimsy, if I can put it that way. What is your policy on correcting such errors?
 Sincerely, [REDACTED]

BOSTON
 111

and Boys with Water Buffaloes under Willow Trees, China, Yuan dynasty, 14th century

Anonymous

Hanging scroll, ink and light color on paper, 42.5 x 14.49
 Special Chinese and Japanese Fund, 14.49

© 1999 Museum of Fine Arts, Boston

