Sunday afternoon, April 25, I tuned in for a brief time to the C-SPAN coverage of the gays' activities in Washington, D.C. What was happening on that stage was unbelievable (and unreportable). I can't understand why those people were not arrested for lewd conduct. Are there no longer any laws preventing public displays of obscenity? Although I didn't see it myself, at one point in the program TV celebrity Phil Donahue was reported to have bellowed, "America, get used to it!" Well I don't want to "get used to it," and I bet there are millions (and I don't mean hundreds of thousands) of the silent majority Americans out there who feel the way I do but who have been too busy working to support their families and the Government to converge on Washington and make a lot of noise. We need someone to rise up and organize us, not necessarily a renowned religious figure whom the media would immediately target for ridicule. (Personally, I'd like to see a Marine lead us in this endeavor.) But watch out if we get the right person. We'll converge on Washington in the millions for our silent-majority rights. I want the right to protect my children and grandchildren from such depravity. If these degenerate derivatives of pornography are given special rights based on their "sexuality" we will have nurtured a breeding ground for perversion. In defense of lifting the ban on gays in the military, gay leaders have stated that they too support responsible sexual conduct. Well, Sunday's theatrics should leave no doubt about what happens, even in public, when they get together.

Fellow silent-majority Americans, I know you are busy (I'm one of you), I know you work hard to support your family and the Government, but please take time to call or write your Senators and Representatives and members of the media. And start saving up some vacation time. We may have to march on Washington to protect our silent-majority rights.
