Dear Mr. Collins,

First of all, I want to express my appreciation to C-Span for the coverage of all the debates and also for the call-in after each one. I've tried so hard to get through but wasn't lucky enough to do so. The reason I wanted so bad to go through is because I want to give my observation of the events.

The debate formats were all fine and varied but I think Clinton is like a broken record and always avoid answers especially about his anti-war activities in a foreign country and just repeats generalities about his plan + this last debate he says "Read my plan". Who has access to his plans? The common mass don't have access to that. His stance is so arrogant it makes me sick. As for Perot, he thinks it's a single task to tackle the deficit, the economy etc. It doesn't work that way. Government is not just the president - it's a whole bunch of people working together or against each other as what is happening now. Congress is trying very hard to discredit the president.

My observation is this: that Clinton and Perot are in cahoots. Perot quits to the surprise of his supporters barely a day after Clinton was nominated at the convention. Then when the campaign is almost close he jumps in again. I believe this is a ploy to take away votes for President Bush. Also, in all three debates the two agree ~~with~~ ^{to} each other & they lambasted President Bush so much. But President Bush stood his ground and conducted himself as a president should. I can't understand why some people could stand Clinton who positions himself the only person who can make any changes. I can't swallow how he has the nerve to face the American people and ask for their vote so he'll be president when he turned his back on our country when he was needed. I know there were many dissenters, but they did not demonstrate against the US in foreign countries and they are not seeking the presidency. Most people say character is not an issue, but it is a very important issue. How can a man who admitted using marijuana, cheated on his wife and ran away from his duty as a U.S. citizen seek the presidency? Shame on him. What kind of Commander-in-Chief will he be? During the debates only President Bush appeared presidential and dignified. I believe he should be given a chance to get his programs going. President Bush and his family have integrity and I am in favor of his family values policy. I am also pro-life and against using my tax money to fund abortions for promiscuous women, Abortion is murder.

I have many more things on my mind but I wouldn't want to take up more of your time ~~and~~ as I know you receive thousands of letters. But I also like to mention how Perot disregards the draft issue and says it's history since it happened many years ago and is not relevant. I believe strongly that it is relevant for a person seeking the presidency to have strength of character, a sense of duty and patriotism and responsibility, good judgment, a firm conviction, honesty, understanding and compassion.

Please excuse my handwriting / penmanship because I am partially blind and have arthritis.

Thank you very much for your time,
More power to you!

Respectfully yours,

Mrs. [REDACTED]
