Re: Topic for "Journalists Roundtable"

A week or two ago I read that the USA had protested China's disregard of USA patents, China's use of prisoner labor for the manufacture of merchandise exported from China to USA, China's barriers to many of USA's exports, etc. (this could be the first time since the 1960's that I've used "excetera") China flung down the gauntlet, saying something to the effect, "You boys want a trade war, we'll show you a trade war."

When I read that I thought, "Bet that Brian will have this on the front burner." But no luck.

Thursday my hopes were revived when I heard Sen. George Mitchell address the Press Club. He asked why everyone was so exercised about Japan when China was a far greater threat. You repeated that address just before Friday morning's Journalists Roundtable and yet you failed to mention it.

Get with it young man. We expect no less than perfection from our esteemed leader.

*As the lady said, you are the greatest thing since sliced bread.
Doesn't it give you a great bang
when people all over the world
call you Brian?*
