Dear Brian -

The trust you have earned by a fair and impartial stance is aided by a balance attempted by scheduling two opposing guests. But, as I'm sure you know by now, this trust is eroded when you also attempt to screen calls on a pro/con basis. The people's voice, in the lucky the draw, is an integral part of why we trust C-SPAN and you. Balance the guests, surely, but let the callers not be selected to ensure balance, else C-SPAN loses its reputation of free access.

On another note, I am disappointed that the Washington Times is never identified as an arm of the Unification Church (Moonies). Although they strive mightily to preserve the fiction that the Moonies exercise no editorial control, the viewpoints of its employees are more than coincidentally in accord with the Moonies right-wing agenda. ...and, of course, "Thanks to C-SPAN!"
