Dear C-Span

This mornings show with the 3 reporters is a good example of how out of touch our press is with our own people, and how ill informed they are on the whys and wheres of the past. Of course, that's in no way any surprise to us when by their sexy stories they show they are far more interested in what is going on every place else, and not here, so think we should be too which is far from the case.

This is my country, and I've been hounded by their interests for 45 years. I don't find it any crime to care about what goes on here to affect my future, and that of my posterity even if they are far more intrigued by what goes on elsewhere, and feels it their responsibility to shove it down my throat even if I don't give a damn whether I know it or not.

That's why so many here-to-for large newspapers have gone belly up in the past. They aren't supplying the things anymore that the people really want to know like they did for our parents.

I've never heard such a stupid answer as to why the Marshall plan was such a cinch to happen, whereas today eastern Europe is a hollow ring.

He saw in newspapers how our bombing in order to win the war had flattened practically everything in western Europe so how could they get back on their feet without help by us who had been unscathed by even 1 bomb? Not because our ancestors had come from there as that dumb broad thought!

Our ancestors didn't leave because they thought it was so great being there. And believe me they let us know it too, and how much better they had made it possible ^{for} us than what they had known. Maybe that's why I get so angry when the press tries to make me think today I am now supposed to care about everyplace else but here.

Well, I don't! I'm so damned fed up with having to hear about that damned foreigners while I have to dig for what I want to know about what I need to know to take proper care of things here at home that I don't even want one of their god-damned magazines or newspaper in my home anymore. I get more of what I need to know from a free weekly newsheet, put out locally, and the grocery ads besides.

As for your own edification, I doubt that I'll be spending much of my time with C-Span next week. I've been treated to quite enough of how my so-called government is prepared to give away more bits and pieces of my country already. In fact I've had a belly full that's up past my earlobes now, and therefore my ears can't hear anymore of it.

My mind prefers to think in the way I was taught that it should for the good of my country.

Since playing games is all this government knows anymore since gamesmanship came into style 30 years ago, I may as well just watch the game shows next week, and make it easier on my already elevated blood pressure.

The trouble with most living east of the Mississippi is they've enjoyed the blessings of this country for so long. They've forgotten what it was like otherwise. Maybe that's why so much of their population is now going elsewhere, because even in their stupidity they sense something wrong, and have to find out what it is.

Hopefully it won't be too late to save this country, but I'm afraid their conceit about their importance, and supreme knowledge will come too late. Re: The Marion Barry slop. And still mayor! ???

Sincerely
