Thank you so much for that wonderful program on the White House. I watched it all and found it fascinating. I had been on a tour myself way back in 1958, and carried away special memories of the beautiful landscape paintings; also the china and, I believe, they also had a set of Lenox china in the China Rooms because one of the things I distinctly remember, was a chocolate set I had a duplicate of. The one in the White House had a Royal Blue & gold border; mine has an aquamarine blue & gold border. It is a family treasure, stamped on the back "Willet" which was the name of the factory originally before being taken over by Lenox. My husband grew up in Trenton, NJ, which is near the Lenox plant - and all the Trenton brides in the early 1900's wanted Lenox china for their hope chests!

I enjoyed hearing about Harry Truman's know-how about construction, but most of all & the reason I wrote this note was your handling of our President, the glimpses of the Oval Office, and his favorite memorabilia. O.W.H. TOUR

The Child Hassam Painting Pourssing on the big American flag told me much about his love of country, and it was perfect for the Oval Office. I'm familiar with that painting and have always loved it.

Like the majority of the American people I support and admire this President and find it almost unbelievable that the Republican Party has agreed to his constant harassment and persecution.

I rely on C-Span and the LA Times for my political news, having long ago surmised the power of corporate America on TV and cable news. In addition, you offer so many highly informative conferences and forums. And I especially appreciated the appearance of Vice-President Gore a few weeks before the Nov. 3rd election to tell the public about the responsibility of Newt Gingrich for the scurrilous TV ads then running against the current administration. I reflected on how important that issue was to impel Al Gore to feel he should speak out to the nation about it. (And then I got on the phone to my friends, to spread the word!)

Thank you for your excellent programming.
