Dear Producers:

You people are driving me crazy... You never seem to repeat the programs I'm interested in! Or -- you cut short something of great interest to me. Case in point: The Anti-NAFTA Rally at which Ross Perot was the main speaker. I was so looking forward to hearing Pat Choate who was one of the last two speakers. But what did you do, you cut off your coverage. Goodness, gracious -- there were only two more speakers to speak. I realize it was a long Rally, but you have covered many long events in their entirety in the past.

I really felt cheated and rather offended! What you did was like turning the radio off before Kate Smith could deliver her last note to "God Bless America"; like turning the movie projector off just before the mystery is solved; or like grabbing the book I'm reading out of my hands before I can read the ending; and last but not least, grabbing my plate before I have a chance to take the last bite of a delicious piece of cake.

Really, now, you should be more sensitive towards your faithful viewers when you make these decisions!

Disgruntled,
