

Program Examines Network's Policies

Do Viewers Influence Programming Choices?

Hunter: "Yes and no. They influence us in some ways and in other ways they don't. A good example of that is when we get a barrage of letters asking us to cover a conference...."

"We take that in stride and ask for the agenda and look at what the content is and see if it fits in with our public policy guidelines."

"So [the letters] really don't influence us a lot. But viewers do influence us when we hear about something—like a particular conference—from a viewer."

"If we don't know about it, we'll get on the phone and find out about it."

Overseas Trips

Westchester County, New York: "I was wondering why you did not cover the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, which has been an umbrella organization for European countries?"

Overseas Trips

Westchester County, New York: "I was wondering why you did not cover the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, which has been an umbrella organization for European countries?"

Murphy: "Our resources are limited so when we send a crew overseas, we have to choose very carefully where to send our cameras and send our resources."

"We wanted to explore Europe 1992, the European Parliament, and Berlin, and because of limited resources, we can't fulfill all of our goals. But that's a good suggestion."

What to Expect When Calling a Call-in Program

Trahern: "From the minute your phone starts ringing, [the caller should] stay on the line. You won't be picked up right away."

"It means that you're on line to get on the air. We don't pick up the phone until right before you go on the air so you don't incur [higher] long distance charges."

"When you are picked up, one of the production assistants...will ask you for your city and state, and ask if you've called in during the last 30 days to make sure you're not a violator of our 30-day policy."

"Then she'll ask you what [issue or topic] you're calling on."

"She's not trying to screen your call..."

"But she's trying to insure you're calling on the topic that [is being discussed that] morning or evening."
