I no longer will arise at 4 a.m. to hear your call in program. I have shut off my alarm clock and my former practice of taking a nap in the afternoon to accommodate this practice. I did this for 5 years. I formally felt it was worth the effort for me to see how the country was going politically by the number of people who called on each topic.

Since you put in the practice of separate lines for Democrats and Republicans, I have heard nothing but Democrats who say they are Republicans and then go on a rampage about how bad the Republicans are and they are switching their votes to Clinton. You have done nothing to ask these viewers why they called in on a Republican line when they bash Republicans. Either that or you are only pushing the button on the Democrat line.

What is it? Can't Democrats dial as fast as Republicans? What started this practice? Do they need a program to let them have more people talk because they were abused as children and don't know how to use the telephone? Are Democrats so disadvantaged that they need preferential treatment and an affirmative action program sponsored by C-Span?

split

Today after the Dole announcement to pick Kemp as his Vice Presidential nominee I sat down to write because I have just heard 5 Democrats in a row call and you had a Democrat to answer the questions from San Diego. And this has been going on since you started this format.

I am sad because C-Span was the only channel on Television that did not have a partisan view. You know as well as anyone that the Media is terribly biased. You have had trouble getting newspaper people for years who are Republicans. We Republicans had no network on which to hear an unbiased view until C-Span and alas you have now found it in your hearts and possibly your pocketbooks that you must favor Democrats also.

Au revoir,
