Dear Mr. Lamb:

My name is [Redacted] and I am from Senegal. This morning I was very pleased to hear you announce that next Friday you will have open phones for new citizens. I am writing for a possible appearance as a guest to the Washington Journal next Friday.

I came to the United States in 1986 to study at the University of Arizona. I became Permanent Resident in 1991 and a citizen in 1998.

I obtained my Bachelors' degree in August 1993 with a double major (Political Science and French) and my Master's degree in May 1995.

I first came to Washington, D.C. to do a fellowship at the U.S. Department of Education, Office of Public Affairs through the Washington Center's Minority Leaders Fellowship Program (MLFP) in the spring of 1996. After my fellowship, I went to Chicago at the Democratic National Convention before returning to Washington, D.C. for a Capitol Hill job.

First, I did a three-month internship in the office of the Honorable Ed Pastor (D-AZ) before landing to my current position. Right now I work as a legislative assistant/correspondent in the office of Congressman Jose E. Serrano (D-NY). I handle Immigration, DC appropriations, Veteran's Affairs and Electricity issues for the Congressman.

Attached, please find a copy of my resume

Thank you for your attention to this request.

Sincerely,
