Dear Mr. Lamb,

I was highly amused by your fairness efforts this morning on The Journalist's Round-Table. I believe Christopher Hitchens had a point about President Clinton's tax-funded, propaganda oriented, very professional P R organization. We see it over and over again every day on television.

I believe trying to create a balance may be a mistake. Perhaps it only adds to the class warfare, and the divisiveness in our country. Such a balance tends to lock thoughts and ideas in, on one side or the other. Random calling would be far more representative of our country's diversity.

Balancing of guests, I suppose, must be, as long as you have guests of other opinions besides left/right, Democrats/Republicans, or liberal/conservative. There are many other alternatives, especially independents and middle-of-the-~~road~~ers.

Rather than locking opinions in to one side or the other, there should be room for individual thought in this country which is rapidly becoming extinct due to the increase of "Big Brother" tactics.

The above comments are why your strategy this morning was not working. Perhaps it seems fair to you since you are so often accused of imbalance by the viewers, but pure random calls are far more interesting and educational.

I thoroughly enjoyed this morning's show, as the public clearly showed it dislikes manipulation.

An avid viewer,
