Dear "Brian,"

Professional indignation and dismay prompts this appeal to you.

Apropos the Welfare Reform panel
(C-Span 1/18/94):

Have we forgotten that parents are people; that people come in a vast variety of capabilities?

Have we forgotten that parenthood is among the most complex of human tasks and one for which there is virtually no preparation?

Have we forgotten that parenting
skill do not come with procreation;
they must be taught;
they must be practiced;
they require ever expanding knowledge to accommodate the growth needs of the human being

Expecting an individual to be both parent and employee is in most instances an overexpectation with many victims.

Treating the individual as though he/she is a robot to be programmed according to society's specifications is a disastrous course.

Armageddon may indeed be in the offing.

S.O.S. !!!

With appreciation and profound gratitude for your perspective, vision, and wisdom.

Sincerely,
