

and any other salient helpful information.
I am going to write more on this later.

Atlanta, Ga.
Nov. 5, 1996

C-Span:

I have been watching Camille Paglia addressing a group at Yale University. She is very lively and interesting (not that I am too convinced by her arguments).

What I wish to comment on is the paucity of information regarding Ms. Paglia and the forum she is addressing. I did not see the opening of the program, and as it progressed I only learned ~~two~~ three things: (1) the name, Camille Paglia, (2) the word, "author," and (3) the subject, ~~"Election"~~ "Electing a Female President."

The problem here is universal with commercial TV, Public TV and C-Span: The viewer out here is presumed to be handicapped in a chair from the beginning to the end of the program. The solution might be to repeatedly run small-type subscript (to A)!

have more background of speaker,

C-Span
400 N. Capitol Street N.W.
Suite 650
Washington, D.C.

