

Dear Bryant,
Here is the latest on the Hull case.
We in Indiana believe he is an truthful, honorable, hard working farmer.

Hull says he'll return to Costa Rica

Supporters hold press conference outlining his planned legal action

From staff and wire reports

John Hull today said he plans to return to Costa Rica, but only after the national government changes in May and "ridiculous fabrications" about his involvement in a 1984 bombing in Nicaragua are finally laid to rest.

Hull, who is recovering from heart surgery last week, said yesterday's news conference in Washington, D.C., outlining his planned legal action was "worthwhile, money well spent."

Hull's friends, his 18-year-old son and supporters, after traveling from Indiana to Washington, D.C., yesterday outlined legal action Hull is planning against those who continue to spread allegations about drug trafficking and gun running in Costa Rica.

During the news conference, Costa Rican Ambassador Danilo Hernandez said Hull, "should be tried by the courts of Costa Rica, not by the press or by his friends."

"Mr. Hull is a (naturalized) Costa Rican citizen and therefore he is subject to Costa Rican law," Hernandez said. "He has been accused; the investigation has been carried out."

Hull, 70, had been scheduled to appear at the news conference to discuss plans to sue people he contends fabricated the evidence on which a Costa Rican prosecutor's report is based. His health, however, caused him to remain at his home in Patoka, Ind.

"I am going back. I have too much invested there not to," said Hull, who for 20 years has owned a large ranch in northern Costa Rica. "But I'm not going back until the government changes, the new president takes over in May, and I know I will get a fair break."

After Hull left Costa Rica last July, drug charges that had landed him in a Costa Rican jail were dismissed. He said he needed to come to the United States for treatment of a heart condition that had hospitalized him in Costa Rica.

Gus Breene, who identified himself as a former test pilot who has investigated charges against Hull, said Hull's suit would seek several million dollars in damages and would be filed within the next few weeks in a federal court.

Hernandez said a request for Hull's extradition to Costa Rica is moving through that nation's legal system, but indicated it might be months before it is ready to be filed.

Gettys keep making money

Fifteen-year-old actor Balthazar Getty, grandson of the late oil baron J. Paul Getty, is busy building his own fortune while filming a remake of "Lord of the Flies" in Jamaica.

"The older kids in the movie started little businesses, and we made over $1,000," he told People magazine. "We had a whole black market. We arranged circuses and made a haunted house and charged admission. We ripped the little kids off selling them things like conch shells, which we could find 10 of and then sell for $70 each, and they thought it was the best deal of the century. They're really only worth like $5. They never found out."

Wouldn't granddad be proud?

The ambassador denied accusations Hull has made that he was denied medical attention for more than 50 hours after his arrest.

Hull, in comments read by Breene, denied the charges against him and contended they were based on perjured statements.

Breene said Hull has told him he intends to return to Costa Rica and face the charges "as soon as his health is repaired."

Among other charges, Costa Rica wants Hull to stand trial for allegedly planning the bombing of a news conference being held in a house in La Penca, Costa Rica, on May 31, 1984, by Eden Pastora, a Contra commander who had defected from the Sandinista cause.

Miami attorney Tom Spencer, who has read the recently released report about the bombing, said the document is "a revision of the earlier false document that was totally made up."

Spencer, who participated in a federal court trial in Miami that arose from a civil lawsuit over the bombing, said he finds the possibility remote that any American court would sign an extradition order for Hull "based on such a bundle of lies and blatant fabrications."

The attorney also noted that the bombing occurred in Nicaragua, and he questioned the Costa Rican government's jurisdiction in the incident.

"The report is clearly contrived. They've updated it to include some attention-getting stuff about General Manuel Noriega and the Panamanian drug cartel. But it's the same old crap," Spencer said.
