Dear Sir,

I am a C-Span devotee having always wished for a TV program that would give a balanced report of the major issues of our times.

Last night I went to dinner with a group of people in at least the 70th percentile of intelligence and knowledge and someone asked if we had heard that Pres. Bush owned part of an oil company that was pumping in Kuwait and that was why we got into the Gulf War so quickly. I have a Master's degree and am somewhat of a skeptic and took a lot of abuse from my acquaintances because I thought if we had learned anything in the past 2000 years of preaching Christianity plus the lessons of WWII and Vietnam, it should have included the knowledge that wars really don't solve anything.

I had this opinion since the beginning of the invasion of Kuwait and its still unpopular among my friends.

But -- if we are going to govern ourselves intelligently, we need to know!
I can understand the reluctance of any news commentator to throw out a comment of this magnitude against a sitting president, but isn't there some place where a reporter could find out whether Pres. Bush has a large financial stake in any Kuwait oil fields?

Thank you,

Sincerely,
