Dear People:

What a delight to have your fine TV network bring us booklovers such a program as About Books! The wide variety of topics and events covered is both interesting and stimulating and I look forward to it every week.

Since you are taking us to various bookstores around the country I thought you might be interested in a most unique one I discovered on a recent trip to Charleston, South Carolina this past Spring. It is Southern Literary Tradition and only Southern writers are featured. On the shelves allocated to each writer is a photograph of that writer which adds to the enjoyment of the collection. Fiction, history and biography are included, many of which are published by university presses and often hard to find in other bookstores.

Also, the shop was chosen by the film makers of the TV production Scarlett for one of the Charleston locations. Pictures taken during the filming are displayed in the shop. Ms. Evans has many entertaining and amusing anecdotes to tell of that time.

If you should be interested you'll find pertinent information on the enclosed card.

Best wishes for a long life span for About Books.

Sincerely,
