I watch C-Span because it is the only way I know that we on the West Coast can keep abreast of what is really going on in the capitol of our country to some extent. We have only television newcasts or newspapers, both of which have biased opinions and very limited time and space to inform the public of the events which are happening in Washington, D.C. I especially appreciate seeing our leaders as real people with real feelings and faults, which often come through on C-Span in place of the "perfect" cardboard image they tend to project in media orchestrated appearances.
