Dear C-SPAN:

I have found your coverage of the House of Commons extremely valuable; however, a change in format has made your coverage much less effective. Until recently the district represented by the MP was given in the identifying subtitle, but that is no longer done. Because of the different social and economic interests represented in the UK, it really is essential to know from where the MP comes. Without knowing the district, many of the comments cannot be put into context and are of little value.

I would ask the organization providing the coverage to reinstitute a full identifying subtitle.

Sincerely,

P.S. An alternative, but not a good one, is to offer through the mail an alphabetical list of all MPs, listing their districts; viewers would then watch with list in hand.
