Dear Brian:

As a classic C-SPAN excessive, and having had the honor of appearing in your December 13, 1993 C-SPAN digest, I am going to presume that I have a fractional edge here on input. ha

I want you to know that I am doing everything I can to spread the word here. I am currently looking into teaching an adult education evening course on Government and the information C-SPAN provides. I find it interesting that C-SPAN is never mentioned on regular network news reporting.

Brian, please know, first and foremost, nothing I comment on would ever be meant with any malice intent. I think you're all doing a splendid job.

Lately, I have noticed a slight loss in my usual C-SPAN enthusiasm on Friday mornings, "Journalists Roundtable." Generally speaking, many of the journalists' responses are not as informative as I would expect. With the exception of the mean-spirited callers, I often learn more from the callers. There certainly is pot-pourri out there. It's fascinating.

Please let Bruce know that he is one of my favorite hosts. I love his style, and those special handshakes after his programs. I suspect that he has a great sense of humor. I really enjoy him.

Lastly, I have some suggestions for you on possible future guests. I am convinced that your C-SPAN audience would find them stimulating. They are as follows:

Outside the beltway:

- 1) [REDACTED] Elmira, N.Y. [REDACTED]
- 2) [REDACTED]
Long Branch, N.J. - [REDACTED]

The above gentlemen are confirmed intellectuals.

Inside the beltway:

- 1) [REDACTED]

I saw [REDACTED] at a House, Ways & Means committee hearing on C-SPAN. He was dynamic, and I am certain your viewers would find him controversial.

That's all for now Brian. Thank you again for opening up a whole new world to me.

Warmest regards,
[REDACTED]
