Dear Folks,

Life, as I've found it, has lots of folks who will criticize; and precious few that will offer an accolade.

Seems to me you offer a most unique information service. I've noticed that you tame the fanatic, left or right. No small accomplishment, methinks. When straight line party voters start to discern, and split voting. A real plus.

Funny-odd, I've noticed that most folks that learn to view your programming come up about 10° left or right of center. A most sincere tribute to: no matter your own beliefs, it does not show up as bias. Bet you a dollar to a donut, most folks informing the public would like to hear that statement about them.

→ SMALL POINT: Came up because of the word "arcane". I was surprised that recent college grads, and seasoned computer design engineers did not know that arcane meant "secret". Meanings to these people too wide to repeat.

When you sense that semantics are coming into play as in the use of this word "arcane", do you suppose it would be in order to ask just what that speaker means when he employs a word that could be misunderstood? Even by a reasonably, by most standards, sophisticated audience.

Oh, as for the accolade. May you enjoy knowing you are indeed serving the public very well, and only need to keep up the good works you perform.

Respectfully yours [REDACTED]
