

Dear Sirs:

4/15/84

I watch C-Span because it shows me what is actually happening within the halls and offices of our governmental system. It delivers the news straight to my home, as it is happening. I have received an education of sorts by being able to see exactly how our government operates on a day by day basis. This is a valuable service to me and other individuals of our nation who are unable to spend the time and money that it would necessitate to be able to observe the intricate movements of our political administration. Today's society is becoming more and more information oriented, and C-Span has given me access to "the" information. This information is presented to me as it is, not through the interpretation of some reporter. It complements my intelligence by assuming that I can appreciate and digest said information on my own. I watch C-Span because the events are live, not one day or even one hour old; but live. For me C-Span is the knife that is the cutting edge of information distribution for the rest of this century. To be able to have access to news as it is being made will play a center role in the actions of our government and its people. I feel that it will make for a more responsive government. Old news will be old hat. C-Span is a fine example of technology that is made purposeful in that it provides the means whereby our sociopolitical environment can reach for its higher goals. That is why I watch C-Span.

Sincerely
