Dear Mr. Lamb:

I am becoming weary of those who call in to bash Congress! I have a few comments to make concerning this subject. First of all, if a Congressman is in his second or subsequent term of office, then the voters can look in their mirrors for someone to blame! On the other hand, Voters forget that Congressmen are in office to serve the Country as a whole and not to placate special individual voter's desires for their own embellishment. Also, "Grid Lock" is a result of our "checks and balances" and a party dictatorship could result without it. Last, but not least to be sure, the United States will be a Republic only so long as its people vote for the candidates they think will govern best and in order to do this, they have to take time to study the candidates, not just pull a straight party lever. Indifferent voters--or voters who are too lazy to vote--could permit unscrupulous persons to gain control of the Government. Some countries, due to voter indifference, have compelled all citizens to vote--those who don't are fined or sentenced. Perhaps we should do this.

The one thing I would like Congress to do is to protect our Flag from the Supreme Court so they can't continue to dishonor it to please some misfits. I believe it is important to keep a patriotic sentiment in this Country, and, for this reason, I am praying for a Republican controlled Congress in the future. Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely yours,
