

O-WJ

September 5, 1995

Dear C-Span:

I have noted, after watching you for a long time, that a larger number of callers who complain, do so because they perceive a liberal bias to C-Span. A smaller number of people who call to complain, do not complain about a conservative bias to C-Span, rather, they complain about the conservative callers and seem to want to quash them. This is not so curious - why should they complain about a conservative bias when there isn't one. Most-wholesnically, Washington Journal has a liberal bias simply because the majority of the media is liberal, no matter how they try to deny it. In assuming, since you keep insisting C-Span isn't biased, that this is because there are so few conservative papers and reporters; therefore, you find it impossible to balance your guests. Am I right? I believe this alone proves the media's leftist views.

This morning, when Mr. Craig Karmen said they didn't delve into the Democrats' mismanagement of the House bookkeeping because they believed we, the public, wouldn't understand it, I almost lost my cookies, turned off the TV, and went outside into the open fresh air and hung up my wash. Sincerely,

P.S.: At least Rush Limbaugh is honest about being conservative, unlike so many reporters who deny they have a liberal bias.

Bestcase, NE 68310-0345

Ron Schreiner

2

