

Suggestion

Mr. Lamb:

I watch C-Span on my cable hook-up fairly often and it seems to me at least that there is too elitist a tone in the choice of the people who are interviewed as well as the subjects. For example, Senator Rockefeller is interviewed about his taste for baroque music, but why not also have on people like David Duke or maybe even Mr. Muhammed, the former spokesman for the Nation of Islam. Even interviews with Mr. Perot would be of some help. My basic point is that the everyday people of society who make up the majority of citizens are not represented. Yet, at the same time it is obvious that many average people are tuned in as demonstrated by the large number of calls generated by topics such as gun control. Then "Joe Six-pack" demonstrates that he is out there listening to all the shows about the elite's of the past and present. Some ideas for future guests and topics are discussions on the legalization of drugs, the widening gaps between the rich and poor, etc. Some of the guests recommended are Louis Farakkhan and maybe even some representatives of the Ku Klux Klan. In other words, don't always try so hard to be "politically correct", i.e. somewhat right of center.

Sincerely,
A Viewer
