Dear Mr. Lamb,

I am writing because I have recently become a "C-SPAN JUNKIE." I don't regret it for one moment. I'm 46 years old, registered Democrat but have consistently voted Republican over the last 12 years and I've never been interested in politics - until now! I discovered C-SPAN during this last presidential campaign and since then watching your coverage of Congress has truly opened my eyes. I think C-SPAN should be required viewing in high school and on every network.

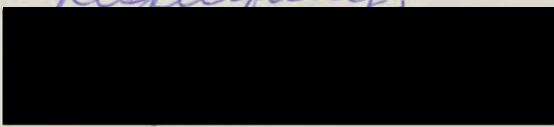

The purpose of this letter is to offer an answer to your question on the Friday, Sept. 10th, Journalist Roundtable. Your question was "How can we find a neutral person on NAFTA?" I truly doubt you can find a neutral person on any issue, since every living person has an opinion. What I'd like to suggest and really like to see on this issue and all the other major issues is representation of both sides of the issue at the same time with the callers allowed to ask questions with an opportunity for follow-up questions.

Two weeks ago, they come close to this format on "This Week with David Brinkley". The issue was school vouchers and they had a state legislator from either Michigan or Wisconsin where the vouchers are being used versus the president of the NEA. Being able to hear the rebuttal of one side's statements by the other side was very enlightening. George Will and Cokie Roberts did well as questioners but it would be great if John G. Public could have that opportunity.

I respect C-SPAN and the work you are doing, and I offer the above suggestion in hopes it might further enhance your most important public service.

Respectfully,
