Dear Mr. Lamb:

I have noticed on your shows, which I almost always watch, that the subject of Rush Limbaugh's racist tendencies is a current hot subject, given the president's comments a few days ago. As it is almost impossible for me to get in on the line, and I have succeeded a few times in the past, I thought I would just like to pass this along for the record.

If you still have your tapes of the New Hampshire primaries, I think you will find a piece after one of Limbaugh's appearances in which he was standing around making a few comments. Apparently Jesse Jackson had been speaking before him on the same podium, and there was a glass of water standing there. Limbaugh said something to the effect that if Jesse had had a drink that he better not. I think that illustrates Mr. Limbaugh's bias pretty well.

Before I saw that, I had put him down mostly as a humorist, as he likes to paint himself, but that little incident gives his whole game away. I think he has probably been told of late to cool it. I would hope that if this question comes up again you would re-air this tape and ask for some comments. I am only sorry I couldn't set your viewers straight this morning in the face of the whitewash being delivered by your Washington Times columnist.

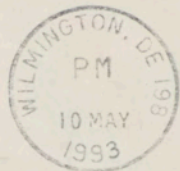

Thank you, and it goes without saying how much I enjoy C-SPAN, and particularly your Book Notes. Perhaps you could put out a T-Shirt saying, "I AM A C-SPAN JUNKIE!" If so, consider this letter my order for one. Check to follow when price known, of course.

By the way, a friend and I have an ongoing question - was Brian Lamb once a governor in a western state? Neither one of us can find the answer to this so could you enlighten us? Thank you.

Sincerely,
