I watch C-Span because I'm helpless to do otherwise. To me, it is utterly, totally, completely, and compellingly fascinating -- at any hour of the day and night. What a satisfying privilege to be able to eavesdrop on the inner workings of legislative processes that ultimately affect everyone of us!

As a recent retiree and comparative newcomer to the wonders of C-Span, I find myself frequently ignoring housework (I'll do it tomorrow); refusing invitations that once I would have accepted (the posturings and postulations of legislators are infinitely more entertaining); and, indeed, structuring my daily schedule around "what's happening" on your exciting network.

I learn so much -- far more than from newspapers, magazines, or lectures. There it is in my own home. It's happening in front of my very eyes. I'm part of the action -- at times applauding; at times disagreeing violently; always emotionally involved.

Thank you for affording me a front-row seat at the best entertainment in town.

I must tell you it keeps my emotional juices flowing. Some of those emotions include admiration, fury, contempt, and frustration at the things I see and hear daily.

I've got this great, big love affair going with C-Span right now. It can't last forever, I know. Nothing of such intensity ever does. But, for the present, just let me enjoy.

Fondly,

Willoughby, Ohio 44094

P.S. Yes, I probably could tear myself away from C-Span long enough to enjoy a trip to where it all happens.
