

Mr Lomb: I don't usually write you but listening to this woman who wrote Divided House, I was angry. One whole hour of nothing but a litany of selfishness. Imagine a woman asking her husband to get a vasectomy. Why didn't she get a tubal ligation? That man is a desk job and has no business being a governor of a state, especially West Va. that needs a strong governor.

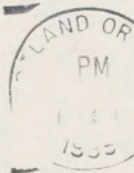

All these women who want a career, a baby, a husband make me sick. Imagine a woman and know their egos are so big that they can't do anything well. They are too selfish to be a good mother, and my heart goes out to their children. They don't have a chance. Why did you feel it necessary to interview her.

Was it because of the work, Post-Bellum syndrome?
I wouldn't want to meet the author or the women and I'm surely not going to read the book. Those women have nothing of value to offer anyone, nor does the author.

I love C-span and am grateful for you, but missed on this one. Most of your book reviews are wonderful.
