Dear Mr. Lamb:

One of the female journalists on a C-SPAN show claimed that some poll revealed that 90% of the Limbaugh viewers watched him for entertainment only. Well, I don't. To me he is someone who has thrown me a rope to keep me from drowning in the fast river of utopian liberalism--has reassured me that there are others like me who believe in Soul over body--not body above Soul! This "Do your own thing no matter whom it hurts" philosophy of the liberals is not predominate; this "If you try you are a winner whether you win or not" damaging philosophy has not contaminated everyone! In other words, there are still real Americans "out there" who still believe that love of God, the Flag and support of a common language have melded us in the past and should be maintained; that aggressive competition develops leadership qualities in those capable of leadership! Everyone cannot be a leader--that's real life! I no longer feel a sense of panic; no longer feel like I am helplessly watching America disintergrating like an ice statue in the hot sun.

Normally, I don't watch talk shows because they thrive on sensationalism by dealing with lurid people and subjects--they are "much to do about nothing" and a waste of time. Rush Limbaugh is different; he is DECENT, above all, a good entertainer but more importantly, an "Uncle Sam" type of American who still believes in God and Country! All Americans had better start studying the Constitution so they can realize how the liberals are extracting from it to suit their own purposes. For example, they love to support freedom of pornography under the First Amendment, but never mention the words, "OR PROHIBITING THE FREE EXERCISE THEREOF" with respect to Religion! The liberal attitude toward Religion, to me, parallels the phrase, "opium for the masses"--now, where have we heard those words before?! As far as I am concerned, this type of "opium" in the schools would solve most of the behavioral problems existing there today!

In conclusion, my attitude and concern were not CREATED by the Rush Limbaugh show. To prove this, I respectfully enclose a poem which I wrote before I knew Rush Limbaugh had a show. This poem was published by the National Library of Poetry and you can probably check the date of submission with them if you wish, but I wrote it long before that.

I am glad C-SPAN is on the air--you are the most honest of the media networks.

Thank you for your attention.

Respectfully yours,

ODE TO THE LAND OF LIBERCUS

A cry of woe for Libercus!
Her stripes of hope on pyre;
Her loyal stars are strewn in ash
While her trusted condone the fire.

So enter the worms of Demonticus
To bore within the laws;
To slyly ban the word of God
With a cunning to reek of cause.

Now watch the spire of Libercus
Once built of creed and mense
Tip slowly aft in sands of doubt
As the faithful repent of sense.

How droll of mind are Libercans
To march without an ear;
While values past are slain with words
And the children grope in fear.

Arise alert you Libercans!
With eyes and ears on high
Lest the burning cloth some make you hold
Is the last freeborn you fly!

NOTE: The word "mense" here is a Scottish word meaning DECORUM, PROPRIETY, NEATNESS, TIDINESS.
