

BROWN ALLEGATIONS MOUNT; CLINTON TIED TO SCANDAL

A letter of introduction to Vietnamese officials written by President-elect Clinton for an Arkansas businessman has come back to haunt him.

EXCLUSIVE TO THE SPOTLIGHT

BY MIKE BLAIR

A letter written by President Bill Clinton to Vietnamese leaders before he took office last January becomes potentially more significant in view of allegations that Commerce Secretary Ron Brown has been secretly dealing with Vietnamese leaders to have the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam suspended (SPOTLIGHT, July 5).

Brown has been accused by a respected Vietnamese-American businessman of secretly conspiring with Hanoi to have the embargo lifted in return for many thousands of dollars deposited in foreign bank accounts and shares in the monetary gain Vietnam derives from doing business with U.S. firms.

While he was president-elect, Clinton wrote a letter on official State of Arkansas stationery to Vietnamese leaders introducing to them a fellow Arkansan interested in improving relations with Hanoi.

Shortly after Clinton took office, his letter surfaced in Hanoi, and the new president was accused of quietly trying to pave the way for rapprochement with Hanoi. If true, this would have been a potential violation of the Logan Act, which restricts the conduct of the nation's foreign policy to the president. At the time, George Bush was still in office.

Now, with an FBI investigation into Brown's alleged dealings with the Vietnamese government, the letter written by Clinton to the Hanoi leaders raises a question once asked by former Sen. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.) at the peak of the Watergate scandal, which ultimately brought down the presidency of Richard Nixon: "How much did the president know, and when did he know it?"

DENIES CHARGES

After the letter came to light, Clinton denied initiating the secret contact between the fellow Arkansan and the Vietnamese leaders. However, the administration has never fully explained the letter.

In any case, last December Clinton wrote a "letter of introduction" to top Vietnamese leaders for Clyde E. Pettit

Jr. The letter stated that Pettit was "working for the eventual normalization of relations between the United States and Vietnam."

Pettit and Clinton reportedly met during the 1960s while both worked for then-Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) who then served as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which held a series of controversial televised hearings featuring as witnesses mostly those who opposed the war in Vietnam.

Pettit opposed the war, as did Clinton. As early as 1965, Pettit was traveling in Vietnam and elsewhere in Asia, filing stories with an apparent anti-war slant for two Arkansas radio stations.

Clinton spent the war years dodging the draft and helping to organize anti-war demonstrations abroad. At the time, he was a student in England, where he fled to avoid military service and to attend college as a Rhodes scholar.

WROTE WAR BOOK

In the mid-1970s, Pettit wrote a book, The Experts, which was about the Southeast Asian conflict. He extensively quoted Vietnamese officials involved in the war to outline history.

Pettit holds an undergraduate degree from Yale University and a law degree from the University of Arkansas.

At the time the letter surfaced in the news, White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers tried to pass it off as a "courtesy" given to Pettit as a constituent of then-Gov. Clinton.

In a telephone interview from Bangkok, Thailand, Pettit told the Reuters news agency he had delivered the letter to unspecified Vietnamese officials in Hanoi, along with similar letters from ex-Sen. Fulbright and Lee Williams, also a former Fulbright staffer.

Pettit said giving the letter to Vietnamese officials was an attempt to improve relations between the United States and Vietnam.

Miss Myers confirmed Clinton had sent the letter and described it as "a letter of introduction from the governor of Arkansas."

She said, "It's not an uncommon thing, but it's not intended to imply this gentleman was speaking for or representing the Clinton administration."

However, it is clear Clinton was more than just a former governor of Arkansas when he wrote the letter. He had already been elected president of the United States and would have to deal with the problem of lifting the trade embargo and the issue of Vietnam's failure to account for American POWs and MIAs still missing in Southeast Asia from the war.

The allegations of deals being worked out between Brown and Vietnam's Prime Minister Vo Van Kiet during the same time frame as the letter written by Clinton for Pettit raise legitimate questions as to whether the two episodes, if accurately portrayed, may have been linked. Brown at the time was Clinton's choice to become secretary of commerce.

"It is ample reason why both reports of alleged impropriety should be fully investigated by appropriate committees of Congress," a source close to the Brown case told The SPOTLIGHT. ●

TOP CLINTON OFFICIAL ACCUSED OF TAKING PAYOFFS FROM VIETS

EXCLUSIVE TO THE SPOTLIGHT

By Mike Blair

A Vietnamese-American businessman has charged that Ron Brown, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, lobbyist and now commerce secretary, entered into a deal with the government of Vietnam, promising to lobby for lifting sanctions against that communist country.

The charges concern millions of dollars in payoffs by the Vietnamese government in return for getting the White House to lift the current U.S. trade embargo against the Hanoi regime.

Sources close to the case say it is being investigated by a team of FBI agents from south Florida and the agency's headquarters in Washington, and that it could erupt into a scandal of major proportions.

Involved in the case, according to the Vietnamese businessman, who was initially himself a participant in the scheme, are Commerce Secretary Ron Brown; Nguyen Van Hao, a former deputy prime minister of the former Republic of South Vietnam; Vietnam Communist Party Chief Du Muoi and Prime Minister of Vietnam Vo Van Kiet.

MILLIONS INVOLVED

Florida businessman Ly Tran Binh alleges he served as executive vice president of a front organization, the Vietnam Development Corp., set up by Hao for Hanoi to make arrangements with the administration to lift the current trade embargo against Vietnam and further economic links between the two countries.

Ultimately, according to Binh's allegations, Hao, who served as chairman of the board of the corporation, based at 67 Wall Street in New York City, would establish direct links between Brown and Kiet.

Binh, in an extensive interview with The SPOTLIGHT and in a sworn affidavit provided the newspaper, alleged that, in return for $700,000 placed in a special account by the Vietnamese government in a Singapore bank and for a percentage of the income resulting from deals between American oil companies and other big U.S. businesses and the Vietnamese government arising from his efforts, Brown would urge the Clinton administration to lift the trade embargo against Vietnam and to establish diplomatic relations with Hanoi.

Binh wants the opportunity to relate his story before appropriate congressional committees.

BROWN'S AGENDA

Binh relates that Hao explained to him that Brown had offered an "agenda" of what he would line up as soon as Kiet gave him his "lobbying contract." Binh's notes of the agenda, as described by Hao, include the following five points:

1. Oil and gas;
2. Telecommunications;
3. Housing and real estate;
4. Banking; and
5. Tourism, including restaurant and hotel development.

When asked if he knew what Brown had in mind under the category "oil and gas," Binh said, "the Rockefeller group." Under "telecommunications," AT&T and John Scully (a major supporter of Clinton) of Apple Computers were mentioned.

Hao, according to Binh, instructed him to "start recruiting people so we can go fly to California to meet John Scully with Ron Brown."

No specific firms were mentioned that Binh could recall regarding "housing and real estate."

Hao, according to Binh, told him the companies that were mentioned would be interested in doing business with Vietnam.

Under "banking," Binh said $50 million was scheduled to come from a Swiss bank account maintained by fallen Haitian President Jean-Claude Duvalier, which was to be arranged by Brown, who had once served as a lobbyist for the Duvalier regime.

This would enable them, Binh said, "to open a private bank immediately in Vietnam to do financing and, you know, all the new deals that are going to start once the embargo is lifted."

Under tourism, Binh was told Brown had indicated Hyatt Hotels would be interested.

Officially, the FBI will neither confirm nor deny it is conducting an investigation.

Inquiries made to the Department of Commerce have been ignored or reporters are told to put their questions in writing.

CNN sent a news crew to interview Binh about his allegations, but has aired nothing yet. Binh also told The SPOTLIGHT he has approached many other major news organizations, none of which has reported on his story.

Vietnam Development Corp. has apparently closed down its Wall Street office in New York. Binh believes that Hao has returned to Vietnam.
