In the ^{known} Seattle Times thing, I did not believe Fancher because the only time ^{he} lost his composure and seemed nervous ^{was} when one caller suggested the paper was out to "get" Brock Adams and again when a caller suggested Fancher had a poor memory "because the paper had always been known as Republican". (Fancher then ^{licked} his lips nervously.) I think it is going to cause a backlash that a person's life and reputation can be ruined when he hasn't been indicted or convicted of anything, and by unnamed sources - by the Press. (If I remember my history books, it was a large number of accusers in the Salem witch trials also. Numbers mean nothing, actually, except a mob may be out to get him.) I fully suspect more Republican "Dirty tricks".

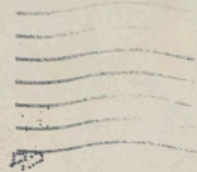

P.S.

C-span is obviously very biased.
You cut people off who criticize the Conservatives too harshly and your guests seem conservative by something like 8 to 1.
