Dear Mr. Lamb:

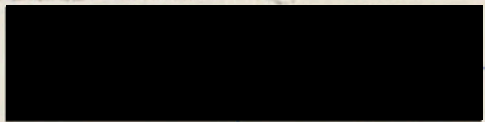

Some days ago, I spotted a C-Span program notice for "The Budget Process," and was immediately interested, because I thought: "Great! Somebody is going to explain the federal budget process..."

Instead, it was a hearing before the Joint Congressional Committee on Government Operations, which was interesting, too.

I think it would be a great service if you were to broadcast an explanation of the federal budget process (now so imminent and important) by an economist who can talk about it without getting us bogged down in jargon. If you can arrange the presentation, you might ask TV Guide to give you some free space to advertise it, because, to my mind, a great many Americans would love to get a clearer picture of how our money is going to be spent. And raised.

Sincerely yours,
