Dear Mr Lamb:

As Canadian winter residents of Florida, my wife and I have become regular viewers of C-SPAN, and appreciate the balance and thorough manner of your coverage of news events and opinions on subjects of great interest and importance: in particular we admire the depth and tone that you and your staff provide in your call-in interviews and panel discussion programs. Unfortunately we do not have access to your channel from our Toronto home.

In January of last year we watched your interview with Sir Antony Acland, the United Kingdom Ambassador to Washington (as repeated 24th Jan 91), and were greatly interested in a caller's reference to Sir William Stephenson and his view of life and its obligations, as expressed to Mrs Elinor Roosevelt.

I tried at the time to contact someone in C-SPAN who could advise if a transcript of this program, or of this particular segment might be available, but was unable to obtain any information or encouragement.

I realize that this is not a time to bother you with a question about an item from last year, but perhaps you or someone on your staff could find and send me this particular quotation, which will be greatly appreciated.

With thanks and kind regards,
